VOLUNTEER PROGRAM

We are looking for people who care!

In 2009, KEP identified the serious lack of research done on captive elephants in South Africa, particularly with respect to their welfare and husbandry within their own unique environments. With this in mind, the Park established AERU - AFRICAN ELEPHANT RESEARCH UNIT - the first research unit in South Africa dedicated to captive elephants.

AERU aims to:

Promote ethical and non-harmful research of captive elephants

Guide management of captive elephant operations through science and research

Provide information relevant to wild animals to improve their protection and conservation

Promote "Conservation through Education"

BECOME A VOLUNTEER!

If you would like to assist with elephant husbandry, welfare and research, we offer programmes for volunteers from across the globe. Please contact us for more information. volunteer@knysnaelephantpark.co.za.

Knysna Elephant Park

More than just a park...

The Knysna Elephant Park has dedicated the last twenty-four years to elephants. More than forty elephants have been rescued and/or relocated by the Knysna Elephant Park and it is both nationally and internationally recognised as one of the best captive elephant facilities in the world. Calves rescued from culls, elephants relocated from reserves where rhino conflict threatened their survival, a tiny calf, searching for milk after losing her mother in a translocation, orphaned and abandoned calves from reserves and zoos, animals no longer wanted by their owners as they were seen to be "unworkable" - the Park has taken each and every one of these animals on, in an effort to give them the best possible future. They have all found a home with the Knysna Elephant Park 'family'. The 'family' stretches beyond the physical borders of the Park and includes not only the animals resident at the Park, but also those that have been released and/or relocated – to other facilities and even wild reserves, where they now roam freely and have started their own new families.

The Park has played a vital role in formulating regulations and guidelines for captive elephants throughout South Africa. It has even worked towards challenging and changing traditionally accepted management to better suit the welfare needs of captive elephants. In 2009, a research unit was started, specifically aimed at improving elephant welfare through science. AERU (African Elephant Research Unit) now collaborates with local and international researchers on a variety of elephant issues, from nutrition and reproduction to communication, behaviour and welfare. The Park has strict guidelines that guide all tourism activities, so that animal welfare is never compromised; and that the impact made by tourism on the elephants is a positive one. Handling of elephants is conducted according to internationally recognised standards. All activities are conducted ethically and responsibly, in line with Best Practice Guidelines for captive elephants.

Contributing to elephant care...

Your elephant encounter begins in the Interpretation Centre where you are introduced to our elephants through beautiful photographic and informative displays. A short video presentation gives you further insight into the park and its elephant-orientated missions and goals. Our facilities are world class and our style of management ensures that our elephants interact with guests on their own terms within this controlled, free-range environment. Visitors to the park are privileged to have a personal encounter with our gentle giants, and leave having gained a new-found respect for these animals, as well as a better understanding of the African elephant and its plight across the continent. Most importantly, by visiting the Park and experiencing our elephant herd, guests make a direct contribution to elephant husbandry and care. Visitors to the Park enable us to give our elephants the best possible facilities, nutrition and care. They also allow us to offer other elephants in need the chance of a better life.
